

NATIONAL YEARLING SALES

Who Bought What at Nationals

The statistics, shown on this page and the following, of what has been heralded as the 'best ever' National Sale make for interesting reading. To summarise the sale in a sentence: It was amongst the yearlings from the Green Pages that the real jump forward was made – the rest was pretty average.

In 2007 the median price of yearling colts showed a jump from R400k to R600k, while the fillies stagnated on the R500k achieved a year previously. This time round, both went forward in a big way. Colts from R600k to 800k, meaning that their median price has now doubled in the space of just two years. Unbelievable. The fillies showed a similar jump, from R500k to R700k. Which means that their median price has doubled in the space of three years. Not bad going either.

Seen in this light, the non-select portion of the sale was disappointing. The overall median for colts dropped from R280k to R275k, while the fillies remained stagnant on R250k. The median prices take in all yearlings sold – both select and non-so. They certainly give a truer reflection of what went on than the average price would have us believe: averages showed colts going up, from R374k to R424k, and fillies from R295k to R369k. Select yearlings fuzzed this picture completely.

In 2007 there were 47 yearlings (31 select) who achieved at least twice the sale average for their sex, this out of a total of 476 yearlings sold. This year, from 501 yearlings sold, the figure was 57 yearlings (36 select). The green pages, in other words, supplied two-thirds of total in both years. Fort Wood had a dozen on the list, compared to 8 for Western Winter and Jet Master – remember that the latter had a massive 60 yearlings on the sale. Nine of the 57 listed yearlings were by sires standing overseas.

And finally, eleven of the 79 select horses sold (12%) didn't make the sale's overall average price of R398k. Which suggests that the selection process to get onto the lucrative first evening of the sale still has room for improvement. We must remember that there's an enormous amount of money at stake on the night. In 2008 the 79 Select horses grossed R74 million (avg 946k) vs. the rest of the sale R124 million (avg 295k). Perhaps the time has come for vendors to pay for the privilege of being labeled Select
